PLAN MEMORIAL SERVICES HERE FOR DEAD RULER

Thousands of Bridgeporters to Unite in Requiem For Emperor.

Arrangements are being made in this city today by prominent persons of Teutonic birth for a great memorial service for the late Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria.

Between 5,000 and 6,000 persons are expected to gather at the Casino in State street for the services, which will be held either next Sunday or the following Sunday. The date hasn't been selected.

Those who are making the arrangements said today that Austrians, Germans and Poles will unite in honoring the memory of the deceased ruler. The gathering will be in the nature of a mass meeting.

Transfusion Falls

To Save Life of

John P. McNamara

Despite heroic efforts made to save his life with blood transfusions in September, John P. McNamara of 54 Hanover street, well known produce merchant, died this morning at his home. Mr. McNamara's family offered $100 to the one who would sell a quantity of blood, which physicians prescribed for his anemic condition. Eleven young men offered their blood, one was selected from this number and the transfusion made on Sept. 26, by Dr. C. N. Haskell and Dr. H. LeBaron Peters. Mr. McNamara's condition improved for several weeks but at the end of the time he began to grow weaker and continued to do so until his death this morning.

Mr. McNamara was 59 years old. He was a member of Sacred Heart church and belonged to the Holy Name society. He had five brothers, T. J., D. E., Timothy A. J., and W. D. McNamara. Besides his brothers, he is survived by his widow, five children, also a sister, Mary Francis Regis, Sister of Mercy of Waterbury.

EXPERT EXPLAINS ECONOMIC WASTE IN MILK BUSINESS

Himself a Producer, Points Out Some Serious Defects in Dairying.

That the milk industry the country over is suffering from the prevalence of an appalling amount of economic waste is the opinion of G. Howard Davison, who has recently made a study of the industry for the National Agricultural Society. Mr. Davison is chairman of the society's executive committee and is himself a milk producer on a considerable scale, his farm being located at Milbrook, New York. Says Mr. Davison:

"The real question in the milk industry is not 'what shall the farmer be paid for his milk' but rather 'how can we eliminate the economic waste now prevalent in all divisions of the industry?'"

"It is true at the present time that the great majority of milk-producing farmers are making little or no money out of their work and there is also little doubt that the investigation would show that the distributors are making only moderate profits. It does not follow, however, that the way to remedy the situation is to pay more money to the farmer, and then pass the burden on to the shoulders of the general public. This might be the correct solution but for the fact that there is an appalling amount of economic waste in the milk industry all along the line from the beginnings at the farm to the end at the home of the consumer."

"Let us note some of the waste at the farmers' end of the business. First of all, there are comparatively few farmers where the dairy herd is one of known quality and quantity. On hundreds of farms there is still to be found the old-time dairy cow now known as the 'boarder.' By that I mean the low-grade animal that does not pay for her keep. The wholesale production of milk or such a basis of course entails a large economic waste. What would it cost nowadays to produce an automobile, say, if the manufacturers had persisted in keeping in service the tools and other machinery that were first used in the manufacture of the motor car? Hardly a farmer living would be able to afford the ownership of an automobile if such were the case. Nevertheless, it is such conditions as these that prevail on many of the dairy farms of the country."

"On how many dairy farms are there scientific cropping operations? How many milk producers understand the correct principles of dairy feeding? How many of them heedlessly allow hundreds of dollars worth of valuable fertilizer to wash away in the rains and snows? And these are only a few of the items of waste at the production end of the business."

"At the distribution end perhaps the largest single item of waste is the needless duplication of delivery systems. Why should not one or two properly managed milk delivery systems suffice for any large city? Instead we find a number of companies, each maintaining its own complete delivery machinery, and each to a large extent covering the ground of the other."

"Who should be blamed for all this? Ourselves most of all. In the present state of public opinion it is doubtful if we would permit the milk dealer to consolidate, thereby eliminating the duplication of delivery systems. A vigorous and educated public opinion would very shortly work out some kind of co-operative plan which would put an end to the present day haphazard dairying methods of the farmers."

"But we do not rise to our opportunities. We prefer, as New York did, to win a temporary peace through the acceptance of a further boost in prices. This in my judgment will prove poor business unless at the same time some sound movement is started looking to the elimination of the evils in the business. For without a betterment of the economic factors of the milk business, there is little in sight for the consumer but the acceptance of still higher price levels."

CORNER FOR COOKS

CHOCOLATE MOUSSE.

Two squares chocolate, one half cup powdered sugar, one cup cream, three-quarters tablespoon granulated gelatin, three tablespoons boiling water, three-quarters cup sugar, one teaspoon vanilla, one quart cream. Melt chocolate, add powdered sugar and gradually one cup cream. Stir over fire until boiling point is reached, then add gelatin dissolved in boiling water, sugar and vanilla. Strain mixture into a bowl, set in a pan of ice water, stir constantly until mixture thickens, then fold in the whip from remaining cream. Mold, pack in salt and ice and let stand four hours.

JOHNNYCAKE.

Take one cup of yellow cornmeal one-half cup of wheat flour, add three tablespoons of sugar, two tablespoons of melted butter, one egg, a little salt, a cup of sour milk and a teaspoon of soda dissolved in the milk.

CHOCOLATE CAKE.

Beat an egg till creamy, add one cup sugar, one tablespoon melted butter, one-half cup sour milk. Stir all together well, add one and one-quarter cups flour in which has been sifted a little salt. Add two heaping teaspoons cocoa (or one square melted chocolate). Beat together, then add one-quarter cup boiling water in which one-half teaspoon soda has been dissolved. Flavor with vanilla. Beat all thoroughly for a few minutes and bake in a sheet. Frost with chocolate frosting and cut in two-inch squares for serving.

FROSTING.

For a change bake in two layers and fill and frost with the following:

BUTTER FROSTING.

Cream together one cup or confectioners' sugar, one tablespoon butter, add two tablespoons sweet milk, one-half teaspoon vanilla. Beat with a fork until like whipped cream.

CHICKEN PIE.

Disjoint and clean the fowl as for a fricassee, removing as much skin as can be easily pulled off. Cover with boiling water, add a scant teaspoonful of salt and simmer gently until the meat is sufficiently tender to remove the largest bones, then set aside until cool. Some like to mix with the chicken meat a little boiled lean ham finely diced, but this is optional. Make a rich biscuit or pie crust and with it line a deep dish. Arrange the meat in this, moistening with some of the chicken gravy, then cover with a top crust. Bake in a moderate oven.

HOW TO LIVE ON SIX CENTS A DAY

"How to live on Six Cents a Day" is a liberal English translation of the title of a lecture which has been delivered in all the principal cities of Germany by Dr. Ismar Boas, one of the foremost of the food experts of the empire. Dr. Boas has a reputation in Germany akin to that enjoyed by Dr. Wiley in the United States, and on his lecture tours, financed by the government, he has had large audiences, composed principally of women. According to reports of the meeting in the Berlin Vorwarts, the leading socialist organ, the housewives have not been very enthusiastic about the Herr Doktor's proposals. He recommends a dietary consisting largely of potatoes, bread, beans and fruit, and distributes at his meetings a leaflet giving menus for each member of a family. Dr. Boas declares that Germans have always been prone to over-eating, and that the adoption of such a regimen as he recommends will have the result of improving the general health of the Fatherland's inhabitants. There is no danger of under-nutrition in the adoption of such a dietary, he insists, but it is plainly apparent that the women are sceptical. "One of the greatest obstacles to victory," Dr. Boas is quoted as saying, "is the food idolatry which exists to a greater extent in Germany than any other land. It is your duty to your beloved fatherland to rid yourself of this food idolatry. It may take some time to accustom ourselves to living on a restricted diet, but when we have triumphed we shall have won a striking victory over ourselves, and a victory that will mean much in attaining that greater triumph over the foes of Germany."

Says Injunction Has Been Obtained For Restraining Stevens

Joseph Morton, of Chicago, who is counseling Mrs. Hattie White in her controversy with Frederick H. Stevens, formerly of Bridgeport, and Mrs. Stevens, over the belongings of Mrs. John D. Candee, was in this city today and he denies that a conservator for Mrs. Candee had been asked by Mrs. White. Judge Paul L. Miller, however, declared application had been made to the local probate court. Morton said an injunction had been obtained in New Haven county restraining Mr. Stevens from further interference with Mrs. White's affairs. Mrs. White has retained a Hartford attorney.

fabricated in the local plants, may soon be cancelled, there is no need for apprehension as to the future of the plants here for it is known that the American & British Company and the Bridgeport Forge & Projectile companies of this city have been able to secure contracts from the United States government that the Remington company have been debarred from heretofore.

It is also a credited fact that agents of the Remington Arms Union Metallic Company in various other countries of the globe are prepared to send orders for manufacture here as soon as the work on the present contracts have slackened off sufficiently to permit of additional orders being executed.

Even failing the receipt of munition orders for which the huge factory is at present well equipped, the possession of several big automobile and bicycle businesses recently purchased by the Marcellus Hartley Dodge interests can at once be diverted to this city and with the change of adapters now utilized on all the standard machinery here the plant would keep in constant and profitable operation.
